

Statement from the National Office of The Wellness Community

The headquarter offices of The Wellness Community and Gilda's Club, two leading non-profit organizations that provide proven programs of support and education for people touched by cancer, have entered into formal conversations to explore closer alignment up to and including a possible merger. With a combined 43-year history and extensive local affiliate and online networks, the two groups share the belief that emotional and social support is as essential as medical care when there is a cancer diagnosis. This combination would create the largest cancer organization in the US dedicated to empowering individuals and building community in the face of a cancer.
